Students are being encouraged to edit their own work. In this activity some common errors students make were stuck around the classroom. They then had to go around the class and write down the corrected sentences. This type of activity encourages the students to pick up on common errors such as missing plural “s” or “is/are” mistakes. In the upcoming writing project the students will be reviewing and editing their own work using the skills they honed in this activity.

In this class, our students worked in groups to put on a play about sun safety in different places, like the park, beach, and farm. They showed various ways to stay safe in the sun, including wearing hats, using sunscreen, and finding shade. This fun project built on what they have been learning in class over the past few weeks and helped them practice their English. Additionally, this activity was designed to help them practice speaking in public and performing in front of an audience.
